PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

As I write this and begin to think of the new year there is a feeling of uncertainty about what will happen to all of us and our family members affected by autism. The State of California, in light of the budget crisis, has proposed several measures aimed at cutting costs on the backs of persons with disabilities, including our children.

The cutbacks being proposed that would likely affect most of us would include enrollment caps on health and human services programs. Can you imagine being told your child has autism only then to discover you cannot get state funded services until someone dies or moves away? No home programs, no respite, no O.T., no speech because the enrollment is capped. The proposed cap will be the number currently enrolled as of January, 2004. Because early intervention is essential, waiting for services will create a population with more significant impairments, higher care needs and ultimately more costs to the state.

Suspension of the Lanterman Act is also proposed. The intent of this act, signed into law over 30 years ago, was to enable persons with disabilities to remain in their home communities with support. Without the necessary services and supports, disabled persons will be forced to return to more "institutional" living arrangements.

Respite and IHSS (In Home Support Services) are also on the chopping block. Because many families are already stretched to the brink, elimination of these services will compel some families to seek costlier options—such as out of home care for their loved one.

I know this is "preaching to the choir", but for those of you unaware of what has been brewing in Sacramento, now is the time to speak out and speak up. Our loved ones have NO VOICE without us. We must all speak out for the health and well being of our children and our families before it is too late. Please take time to call or write to your state legislators and to Governor Schwarzenegger.

SDSU TO OFFER AUTISM SPECIALTY IN SPECIAL EDUCATION DEGREE

San Diego State University has received a $1.25 million federal grant to fund a new specialty in autism within the Master's program of SDSU's Department of Special Education. The grant will entitle 36 SDSU student teachers to full tuition support for the two-year program and provide the San Diego region with its first specialists in teaching children with autism.

DONATION TO SDASA FROM STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE

Standards of Excellence of San Diego held a golf tournament in October, 2003 at the Rancho Bernardo Inn Golf Course. The San Diego Chapter of the ASA was selected by them as the beneficiary of their tournament. We are pleased to report we received a generous check of over $6,000.00! Thanks to Standards of Excellence for their support and generous donation.

AMIGO AWARDS

Give the gift of recognition. The SDASA proudly presents the 1st Annual Amigo Awards — celebrating Business Appreciation Month in March 2004. Please nominate an individual and/or business who has helped and supported your family in the past year. Nomination forms are available from the SDASA office (619) 298-1981 or via email — send your request to info@sd-autism.org. Results will be announced in the March/April issue of Autism Action.

PURCHASE OF SERVICE BUDGET UPDATE

In Response to the severe State Fiscal Year (FY) 2003-2004 budget shortfall, the legislature included a $10 million unallocated reduction to this year's regional centers budgets. Although the unallocated reduction is less than the $100 million reduction required in the FY 2002-2003 budget act, it means that this year the San Diego Regional Center (SDRC) must develop an expenditure plan showing Purchase of Service (POS) cost savings of $626,897.

SDRC recently completed community meetings to receive input on the expenditure plan. The input and plan were shared with the Board of Directors and approved at their November meeting. The plan has been forwarded to the State Department of Developmental Services (DDS) and will be implemented to realize cost savings. The expenditure plan for FY 2003-2004 is available at www.sdrc.org or by calling 858-576-2966

PLANNED CHARITABLE GIVING

As we confront the challenges of the future, we know that the generosity of those who assist us will make all the difference in our success. And there are many ways that your philanthropic giving can accommodate your financial situation and tax planning.

One of the easiest ways to make a gift to the ASA is with a Bequest in your will or revocable living trust. Bequests work particularly well for those who are unable to make an immediate gift, but would like to support the future work of ASA. Please contact the ASA at 619 298-1981 if you would like more information about Planned Charitable Giving. All gifts, large and small, make a difference to the future of ASA.

US GOVERNMENT RELEASES 10-YEAR AUTISM ROADMAP AT SUMMIT

The federal government has for the first time mapped out a long-term plan for addressing the growing problem of autism in the United States. The 10-year Autism Research Roadmap was announced at the government's Autism Summit Conference held on November 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC. The Autism Society of America (ASA), which has long advocated for a major government commitment to autism, applauds the leaders for their efforts and calls on the government to commit the funds needed to give the plan life.

The roadmap was one of the many items addressed at the summit, which was organized by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the U.S. Department of Education and focused on the federal government's role in biomedical autism research, early screening and diagnosis, and improving access to autism services. Autism experts, government researchers, Members of Congress, and ASA leaders presented on a range of issues, including the announcement by ASA President Rob Beck of a new program on the importance of early diagnosis of autism. VISION THERAPY

By: Susan L. Daniel, O. D.
Developmental Optometrist

Q: What is the difference between a developmental eye exam and the eye exam received by my doctor?

A: A basic eye exam provided by your optometrist or pediatric ophthalmologist is necessary to check for healthy eyes and clarity of sight.
A developmental eye exam goes further than assessing ocular health and refractive error. It also assesses how the patient is processing visual information. An analogy is that the basic eye exam checks the hardware and the developmental exam checks
the software of the visual system.

Q: What tests are done in a developmental eye exam?

A: First the visual system is checked for refractive error (farsightedness, nearsightedness and astigmatism), eye health and eye alignment. Next, the ability to focus from near to far, track a moving target, fixate from one object to another, and fuse each eye's images into one is determined. Visual perceptual skills such as right and left awareness, reversals of letters and numbers, visual motor integration, visual discrimination, visual spatial skills and visual memory are then assessed. The patient's visual mid-line and peripheral awareness is also determined.

Q: How do you evaluate a non-verbal child?

A: The traditional approach of having the patient sit behind exam equipment and read letters on a distant chart does not work
for many autistic individuals.
The visual health, refractive error, visual acuity, focusing, eyeteaming and ocular motor skills can all be assessed while the child is playing with toys at a table or on the floor, or sitting in a parent's lap. We use toys, lights or interesting objects as targets and can evaluate reflexes and eye movement with lenses, prisms or filters placed in front of a child's eyes. Visual perceptual skills are tested with non-verbal standardized tests or observation of play with puzzles, stacking cups, stringing beads,
building blocks, ball catching,
etc.

AUTISM ADVICE

Q: What visual problems are commonly found with patients with autism?

A: Patients with autism typically have good visual acuity and healthy eye structures but have difficulty coordinating their eyes to work together as a team or focus accurately. Because they do not have a good sense of where they are in space, it is difficult for them to have good visual attention on a near or distant target. They may either have hyper-acute vision, like seeing the pixels rather than the whole picture of the television. Or, they can have hyposensitive vision where they don't pay attention to detail and have difficulty with visual discrimination. Often there is an inability to integrate the central and peripheral visual fields. A child may become centrally fixated on an interesting object, but be unaware of his peripheral surroundings. Or, he may use his periphery to catch a ball without ever fixating on it.

Q: What can be done to improve these visual skills?

A: Depending on each patient's individual profile, a program is designed to develop the visual skills that are necessary for the patient to achieve his social and educational goals. Developmental activities which teach these skills are either taught one-on-one in the office in a formal vision therapy program, or are shown to the parent, home instructional aide, resource specialist or occupational therapist to incorporate into the child's school or ABA program. Therapeutic yoked prism glasses are often prescribed to help develop spatial awareness or center a child's midline.

Q: Where can I get more information regarding developmental vision?

IS TOOTHBRUSHING A CHALLENGE WITH YOUR CHILD?

Healthy Smiles for Children with Disabilities is a new project of the Anderson Center for Dental Care at Children's Hospital designed to help families prevent cavities and maintain oral health for their children. You can request any of these free services by calling (858) 576-1700, extensions 4801 or 4804.

Home Visits for children birth to 3 in the Early Start Program. The visit includes dental screening and help in finding a dentist. Parent education will cover all aspects of prevention and techniques to address oral sensitivity. Specialized toothbrushes are provided. Parents or educators may call to schedule a free home visit on oral health.

Parent education through support groups. We'd love to share the "tricks of the trade" to improve oral health that we have learned from our experience with children and families. Call to schedule a speaker for your parent support group.

Parent to parent support. We are looking for parents who have overcome challenges with toothbrushing or visiting the dentist who can encourage other parents via email or the phone. A stipend will be provided. Call for more information or if you would like to be a parent supporter.

Help in finding a dentist. A Directory of Dentists Treating Children with Autism is being developed. If you know of a dentist you'd like to see listed in the Directory, please let us know. For help in finding a pediatric dentist, you can call Children's Customer Care and Referral Service at (800) 788-9029.
